

Maintain professional practice in journalism

Overview

This Standard is about working in a professional way as a journalist and managing your contribution so that it has a positive effect on those you are working with. It is about having an enthusiasm for journalism and its possibilities, and its place in a converging media world.

It includes an ability to think creatively and a willingness to work as part of a team. It is about keeping your skills and knowledge up-to-date and adapting to changing technologies and working practices to make the most of the opportunities they present.

It requires a good level of technical competence and general IT skills, and familiarity with current industry standards, equipment and software. You will also need to understand the wider media industry, its subsectors, business models, sources of funding, key stakeholders and job roles and the impact of changing technologies and media convergence, such as the use of multimedia content.

This Standard should apply to anyone who works in journalism.

Performance criteria

You must be able to:

1. present ideas for editorial and related multimedia content to relevant people
2. select the most suitable delivery platform for the content being created
3. use editorial content to tell a story that is appropriate for the platform being used
4. use reliable sources of information to keep up-to-date with industry and market developments, new technologies, creative ideas and techniques, and best practice
5. collaborate with colleagues at appropriate times
6. discuss and negotiate work with others to enable achievement of joint outputs
7. produce work to the required standard in line with creative needs and budgetary constraints
8. devise and implement contingency plans that deliver your work on time
9. respond to feedback on your work in a constructive manner, adapting your work or behaviour as required
10. manage your own continuing professional development on an ongoing basis
11. use industry-standard equipment and software to meet requirements
12. use the appropriate conventions for naming and storing digital data so that it can be identified and accessed by yourself or others
